

"JAP" WAR COUNCIL MEETS TO CONSIDER SOVIET SITUATION

Discuss Frontier Hostilities and Military Campaign in China

EMERGENCY MEETING

Savage Fighting Continues in Changkufeng Hill Border Zone

By Don Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

TOKYO, Aug. 10.—(INS)—While Japanese and Soviet troops hurled hand grenades across No Man's Land on the disputed Siberian-Manchukuoan border, members of Nippon's Supreme War Council met today for a rival discussion of the frontier hostilities and the military campaign in China.

Whether the Council, composed of Japan's highest military leaders, reached a final decision as to their next major move was not immediately divulged.

It was believed, however, that the emergency meeting will lead to results of tremendous importance to both Japan and the Soviet Union during the next few days.

Meanwhile, savage fighting continued in the Changkufeng hill border zone. Japanese army headquarters in Korea reported in an official communique that two more Soviet attacks had been repulsed during the night.

MOSCOW, Aug. 10.—(INS)—Soviet indignation against Japan rose to new heights today as the hostilities at Changkufeng Hill led to another diplomatic clash between Moscow and Tokyo.

The Japanese Embassy here, through its first secretary, lodged a new, stiff protest with the Soviet Foreign Office against an alleged "unprovoked attack" by Russian forces on Japanese troops at Grodekovo, 90 miles northwest of Vladivostok.

The Japanese protest was promptly rejected—energetically and without ceremony, just as virtually all other recent Japanese complaints have been tossed aside.

Soviet officials regarded the Japanese protest as an attempt to evade Moscow's accusation that Japanese troops had attacked, killed and wounded a number of Russian soldiers at Grodekovo, which lies about 200 miles north of the disputed Changkufeng area.

To Teach Plumbing At WPA School Here

A six months course in general plumbing will be offered members of the community of Bristol by the Education and Recreation Division of the WPA.

This course will be conducted by Paul Quirius every Friday evening from 7 until 9 o'clock in the Beaver street school.

The course will include drainage, supply and heating fundamentals. A registration period will be held on Friday, August 12th, from 7 until 9 o'clock in the Beaver street school for the purpose of giving any interested individual an opportunity to enroll.

Quiet Wedding Solemnized In Yardley M. E. Parsonage

YARDLEY, Aug. 10.—A quiet wedding was solemnized in the Methodist Parsonage, Saturday afternoon, at six o'clock, when Miss Irene M. Hansen, of Yardley, became the bride of Karl J. Drews, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Drews, of Yardley. Mrs. Drews had as her only attendant, Miss Edith Miller, while George Bancroft served as Mr. Drews' best man.

Only the members of the immediate family were present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Francis G. Thomas.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Drews will reside in Yardley.

SHEPHERDS' PICNIC

Shepherds Delight Lodge, No. 1, Shepherds of Bethlehem, has planned a picnic for Saturday next at the Devlin Farm, old Lincoln Highway. The group will leave 212 Cedar street at two p. m., a small charge being made for the gala outing. Transportation will be provided if reservations are made by phoning Bristol 3335, 2974 or 2820. A watermelon party is scheduled for the evening, and members are asked to take a box lunch.

The St. Joseph's is the largest Catholic Retreat House in the world, and last year there was an attendance of 4,400 men. The Rev. Dr. J. J. Gibbons is the director of the Retreat.

COUNTY BANKERS TOUR LEHIGH COUNTY FARMS

Three Large Farms Visited On Monday and Fine Crops Inspected

GREENAWALT, LEADER

The annual farm tour of the Bucks County Bankers' Association took place on Monday, at which time the beautiful farming country of Lehigh county was visited.

This year's tour was arranged by County Agent William F. Greenawalt, who was in consultation with the agricultural committee of the bankers' association. They were assisted by County Agent Albert L. Hacker, of Lehigh county, who led the tour from Allentown and gave valuable assistance in many ways.

About forty persons were included in the tour this year. This was a smaller number than usual, due in part to the doubtful weather conditions. The greater number of the visitors were from the upper part of the county with a smaller number from a few lower end banks.

The first stop was made at the farm of Joseph Wolfe, near Mickleys, a short distance north of Allentown. Here the visitors were greatly interested in the peach and apple orchards and grape vineyards. Of special interest was an extensive area of year-old peach trees showing growth and thrifty appearance. The soil on this tract, before being planted to peaches, had been producing alfalfa for some years. Most of this was cut and allowed to remain on the ground for fertility.

The use of cover crops was outstanding on this fruit farm of 120 acres. Pears, plums, cherries and apricots are also grown here to some extent. Another item of interest was a large planting of Golden Jubilee peaches, from which the ripened crop had just been removed and shipped to New York markets. These trees still carried the residue of the crop, and like all the remainder of the trees on the farm, were in the prime of condition.

The former custom of interplanting apple trees with peaches is gradually being abandoned here, and all new plantings of these two fruits are made separately.

The effect of freezing was plainly visible on the grape vines, where the yield of grapes, while good, was greatly reduced through winter freezing. At the farm of P. D. Frantz, near Egypt, extensive areas of potatoes in various stages of growth were observed. The soil in this section of the State is unusually well adapted to potato growing, and this crop is grown very extensively. Mr. Frantz grows potatoes following a stand of sweet clover or soy beans, but finds better results with sweet clover than with soy beans. One large field of potatoes on this farm yielded 560 bushels per acre. This was said, is a remarkable record for a large acreage. An unusual condition on this farm was the very green condition of a large part of the potato crop, which is the Katahdin variety. The visitors

P. O. of A. Members Enjoy Outing at Member's Home

Members of the P. O. of A. Camp, No. 89, held a doggie roast Monday evening on the lawn of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Lovett, Bath St. A social time and games were enjoyed, followed by the roast. Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Owing to the shower Saturday evening, the meeting of the Solebury Farmers' Club which was to have been held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Allan Gwynne, near New Hope, was held in Trinity Hall at that place. The shower also resulted in a reduced attendance, about 75 members and friends having been on hand to enjoy the program which was featured by a very interesting address.

In the absence of Mr. Landenberger, the president, the meeting was in charge of David Johnson.

The forepart of the evening was devoted to committee reports and at that time Albert Vasey, who reported for the crops committee, stated that the heavy rains during the past few weeks had been extremely hard on the crops, especially oats and wheat. Corn and potatoes, he said, also suffered as a result of the rain. In some places, it was said by Mr. Vasey, the potatoes are beginning to rot in the ground.

Owing to the very unfavorable weather conditions on Sunday, attendance at the reunion of the descendants of Zebulon and Anna Engle held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hart, West Court street, Doylestown, was limited to only 21 persons. Arrangements had been made by the hosts for the entertainment of a large number of guests, but only a small percentage of them attended because of the inclemency of the weather.

The afternoon was spent in a very informal manner. The children enjoyed games and in the evening a picnic supper was served.

Mrs. Mary Engle Farley, aged 81, of Maple Glenn, had the distinction of having been the oldest member present and the youngest attending was Norman Maulsbury, aged 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Maulsbury, Doylestown.

The officers of the association are as follows: President, John Campbell, Atlantic City, N. J.; secretary, Harry Engle, Oak Lane, and treasurer, John Engle, Fort Washington.

The time and place for holding the next reunion were not decided at the gathering on Sunday.

Picnics scheduled over the week-end took a terrible beating as a result of the weather, but none were completely rained out. The picnic staged by the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks county at Paul Valley Park, Neshaminy, on Saturday afternoon, was attended by approximately 500 men, women and children who took the miniature cloud-burst gracefully about 3.30 p. m. NEW HOPE CONSIDERS WATER SYSTEM FOR TOWN

Many Favor Municipal Supply As A Means of Protecting Health of Community

MAY GET FEDERAL AID

NEW HOPE, Aug. 10.—At a recent meeting of borough council it was decided to make a survey to determine the cost of a water system. Through the present set-up of the PWA the government will pay 45 per cent of the total cost of the job. It was learned that the portion to be paid by the Borough can be spread over a period of 30 years.

Objections have been raised by some residents who already have artesian wells on their properties.

An engineer retained by the Borough is making a complete survey and will report to Council.

One New Hope resident expressed his approval of the plan from the standpoint of health. In this regard he said: "New Hope celebrated its 100th anniversary a short time ago. For a century we have been using cesspools in town and I think that before long we are going to find that the artesian wells we have now will become polluted when the ground around them becomes saturated with sewage."

New Hope is not alone in this regard. Lambertville also is finding it difficult in many sections to gain the proper elimination of sewage.

Under a plan made a few years ago it was decided that wells would be dug on a high point of ground south of the town so that a good pressure could be maintained by gravity. A large standpipe would be erected to carry an ample supply at all times.

A member of the Board of Fire Underwriters told Council that if fire hydrants were placed on New Hope streets, the homes and buildings located more than six hundred feet from the canal would enjoy a lower rate. The present fight over the canal places owners of real estate in jeopardy of having their fire insurance rates increased. If the Delaware Valley Protective Association is not successful in its drive to have the canal made a state park, the stream might be abandoned. If this does happen, the rates now being based upon a water supply from the canal for fire fighting purposes would be greatly increased.

It could not be learned what the cost of building the system might be. Although a figure of $75,000 was given about seven years ago, one member of the Council said he thought the cost might run close to $50,000.

weather would have brought a crowd of over a thousand persons to the grounds, committee members believe. The Doylestown Moose club bake and picnic at the Stemple farm, Castle Valley, on Sunday was attended by about a hundred members, a small attendance due to the inclement weather. There was a very large attendance at the picnic staged by the Doylestown post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the Summer home of Charles E. Grakelow, near Jamison.

Three family reunions are scheduled to take place in various sections of Bucks county on Sunday, August 14. Members of the Trauch family will hold their third annual gathering at Menlo Park. The 13th annual reunion of the Bishop family will be held at Worthington's Grove, near Fountainville, and the ninth annual reunion of the Rice family will be held at Forest Park, Chalfont.

ACCUSE BOYS OF PLACING OBSTRUCTIONS ON TRACKS

P. R. R. Police Arrest Five and Reveal Numerous Obstructions Placed on Rails

WRECKS ARE AVERTED

Pennsylvania Railroad authorities are gravely worried over the actions of persons who have been placing obstructions upon the main tracks of the P. R. R., between Tullytown and Edgely. Five arrests have been made, four of those taken into custody being juveniles. The four juveniles were held for juvenile court, while the adult was held for criminal court, after hearings before Justice of Peace James Laughlin.

Heavy iron plates have been found upon tracks at Edgely, and other obstructions have been discovered upon the rails. A number of windows have been "shot out" of the Edgely station. Heavy iron plates were also found upon the main tracks at Tullytown, Saturday morning, and other obstructions on the rails between Tullytown and Edgely.

The P. R. R. police have been investigating and took into custody Lawrence Rhodes, Theodore Nickerson, Paul Breen, John Young and Steve Oseredusk. The five have been charged with malicious mischief and all held for court.

The latter four are juveniles, while Rhodes was held for criminal court.

According to Lieutenant Sparling, the boys have admitted placing the plates on the rails at Edgely and "shooting out" the windows. They deny that they were implicated in the placing of obstructions at Tullytown.

This division of the P. R. R. is one of the heaviest traveled in the United States. Electric trains thunder over the rails at high rates of speed, and if one should be wrecked, hundreds of people might be injured or killed.

The P. R. R. has assigned police to the area and drastic action is to be taken against any persons caught upon railroad property, other than those who are authorized.

Entertains Friends To Celebrate 12th Birthday

Miss Florence Ludwig, 641 New Buckley street, celebrated her twelfth birthday anniversary last evening, by entertaining a few of her friends at her home.

The evening was enjoyed playing games and prizes were won by John Wade and May Bowker. Refreshments were served in the dining room and the table was decorated in pink and green and a large birthday cake with candles formed the centerpiece. Florence received many beautiful gifts.

Those present were: Virginia Stackhouse, Betty Albright, May Bowker, Marie Rousseau, Florence and Carolyn Ludwig, Mrs. James Swank, Miss Ruth Ludwig, John Wade, Arthur White, Joseph McDevitt, Eugene Walker, William and David Ludwig, all of Bristol; Blanche Harris, Frackville, Pa.

WANTS FRIENDLY PROBE

(Chicago Tribune)

"The efforts of Governor Earle of Pennsylvania to avoid a Grand Jury investigation of the charges of graft and extortion leveled against him and some of his associates recall the gyrations of Tweed and his notorious ring. They also left no stone unturned."

"Gov. Earle has now summoned the Pennsylvania Legislature in special session. The majority of the members are Democrats and Mr. Earle therefore has reason to believe they will be friendly to him. The Legislature is asked to do two things. One is to create a Legislative committee to inquire into the charges. The other is to enact a law to restrict the power of a Grand Jury already called to investigate the conduct of a State administration. If this program is realized there will be only one inquiry into the Governor's conduct and that inquiry will be under the most friendly of auspices."

"The Governor offers an astonishing defense for the course he has charted. The Grand Jury investigation must be prevented, he says, because it represents an invasion by the judiciary of the proper sphere of the Legislative branch of government. Boss Tweed didn't think of that one."

"Governor Earle conveniently forgets that violations of the criminal law have been charged. His administration is accused of extorting campaign funds from public employees and of grafting on public buildings as well as on other public purchases. It is charged, also, that legislation such as the Sunday motion picture law, was bought and paid for."

"The charges, if true, would justify impeachment proceedings in the Legislature. But graft and extortion are not only grounds for

Japan Lodges Protest

Moscow, Aug. 10.—The Japanese Ambassador, here, through its first secretary, today lodged a new stiff protest with the Soviet Union against an alleged "unprovoked" attack by Russian forces on Japanese troops at Grodekovo, 90 miles northwest of Vladivostok.

The Japanese protest was promptly rejected—energetically and without ceremony, just as virtually all other Japanese complaints have been tossed aside.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff On Stand

South Paris, Me., Aug. 10.—Ex-Deputy Sheriff Frances M. Carroll, on trial charged with the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield, took the stand on his own behalf today as the first witness for the defense.

The spectators leaned forward expectantly as the sharp-featured, barrel-chested 43-year-old ex-deputy sheriff walked to the witness box. He wore a brown coat, white shirt, yellow tie and dark trousers. He appeared a bit nervous.

Spectators packed the court room as defense attorney Clyde R. Chapman delivered his opening address to the jury.

Chapman told the jury the defense revised in part the testimony already given by state witnesses. "It is the problem of the defense to show that there were not two murderers in South Paris on the night of October 15th last," said Chapman. "It is the purpose of the defense to prove that the person who killed Dr. Littlefield also killed Mrs. Littlefield."

Mrs. Lydia Littlefield was slain about 36 hours after her husband was murdered.

MORRISVILLE FIREMEN ORGANIZE DEPARTMENT

Two Companies to Act as Unit In Matters of Community Interest

PLAN FOR CONVENTION

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 10.—The two Morrisville fire companies have joined together into the Morrisville Fire Department and will act jointly in matters of community interest. They will continue, however, to operate separately in other than community matters. The department comprises the Union Fire Company, No. 1, and Capitol View Fire Company, No. 2.

Joint meetings are to be held at frequent intervals. The next meeting will be held Tuesday night, August 16, at Capitol View Fire House.

Captain Sawyer, of the Trenton Fire Department, and an instructor in the Trenton Fire School, addressed the firemen at a recent meeting and there was a general discussion on the fighting of fires.

Announcement was made that another first aid class will be organized for members of the local department. The firemen discussed the coming State convention, to be held in Lebanon in October, and it is expected that a special train will be chartered to transport the members of the two companies and the ladies auxiliaries. Plans are being made to take 300 to the convention.

Doylestown Man Files Suit For A Divorce

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 10.—Frank C. Lewis, 212 South Main street business man, has filed suit for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Anne C. Lewis, of 300 South Main street, this place, on grounds of desertion which is alleged to have taken place April 12, 1937.

Last April Mrs. Lewis filed suit for divorce from her husband on grounds of indignities. Her suit was filed by Ross & Ross, local law firm, while Lewis' suit filed in the Court of Common Pleas several days ago was filed by Theodore Kline, attorney for the libellant.

Lewis was married June 12, 1907, in Doylestown.

FIND WOMAN'S BODY IN CREEK AT OAKFORD

Mrs. Mary McGrath, 41, of Frankford, Left Note Telling of Contemplated Suicide

7 CHILDREN SURVIVE

LANGHORNE, Aug. 10.—The body of a Phila. woman was found in the Neshaminy Creek at Oakford yesterday and was identified as that of Mrs. Mary McGrath, 41, 1421 Deal street, Frankford.

Yesterday three boys in a canoe saw the body of a woman swept over a dam. They notified the authorities. Deputy Coroner, Dr. James P. Lawler of Bristol was summoned.

The body was identified by the woman's husband. Seven children also survive, McGrath said that his wife suffered from stomach trouble.

"Mad with pain and fear" after two years of exploratory operations which failed to cure a mysterious stomach ailment, Mrs. McGrath left a suicide note announcing her body would be found on the banks of the Neshaminy Creek. She disappeared Sunday.

Police details combed the area near 1421 Deal street, home of Mrs. McGrath, and volunteers patrolled the creek, but no trace was found until yesterday.

Her distraught husband, John, unemployed, told detectives that on one of the few excursions the family could afford, Mrs. McGrath went for a West-ride several weeks ago. As the bus passed the Neshaminy, a passenger remarked a man had drowned himself there.

Since then, the family said, Mrs. McGrath brooded constantly on destroying herself in the same water. Until the note was discovered Sunday, her husband thought that an appeal to her against suicide had been successful.

The note, addressed to a daughter, read:

"Dear Mary—
"Forgive me, but I am mad with pain and fear. I love you all.
"Your Mother.
"You will find my body in Neshaminy Creek."

Mary is 16. The other children are John, 17; Dorothy, 13; Katherine, 11; Joseph, Jr., 10; Thomas, 6, and Patrick, 5. Mrs. McGrath's father, Thomas Corbett, ran to police at the Paul and Ruan streets station with word of the discovery of the note.

Time To Curb Them

By the Stroller
Borough Council took action which meets with popular favor when it instructed the police to enforce the law regulating the riding of bicycles.

Complaints have been town-wide as to the reckless manner in which bicycles are ridden in Bristol. They are ridden on the sidewalks; after dark without lights or reflectors. It is a frequent occurrence for more than one to ride on one wheel. Babies are carried on handlebars.

One councilman stated, following the meeting, that the other night he saw a man on a wheel towing a small wagon on the rear with an infant in it.

The riders form several in a row across the width of a street and are absolutely reckless in their disregard of other traffic on the thoroughfare.

No attention is paid to traffic lights and many a fatal accident has been narrowly averted at street intersections.

It is stated that some communities are impounding the wheels until such times as the fines are paid.

Other communities license bicycles as a means of controlling them. It has been ruled by the State that one riding a bicycle is subject to the same traffic laws as a motorist.

Let action be taken before there is a fatal accident.

SCHOOL BOARD TO CREATE BOND ISSUE TOTALING $25,000

Money To Be Used in Paying School District's Share of High School Improvements

TO INSTALL OIL BURNERS

Shop and Storage Building Will Also Be Erected At High School

Bristol school board last night decided to install oil burners in the high school and to arrange for a bond issue of $25,000 to be retired within 15 or 20 years.

Plans were made for financing the school district's share of the cost of construction of an addition and making alterations to the high school building. Work was started on the project Monday morning and 45% of the cost is to be paid with PWA funds, while the school district will pay the balance of 55%.

The board instructed the president and treasurer to confer with the board's solicitor, Howard I. James, and arrange for the bond issue. Bids are to be asked, it is understood, for the issue, bearing 2½ and also 2½%.

The board authorized the treasurer to open a construction account with a deposit of $1,000.

Heating of the addition now being constructed to the high school was discussed and it was decided by the board to have its architects, Gundos & Gundos, arrange specifications and to advertise for bids for furnishing and installing oil burners under the present boilers.

It is also planned to build a shop and storage building of brick, measuring 16 by 50 feet, at the high school.

The board authorized the property committee to engage a "Clerk of the Works" during the building operations at the high school. This is required under the PWA grant, and such employee acts in the capacity of an inspector, in addition to the inspector of the architects.

Miss Jane B. Wilkinson, graduate of West Chester Normal School, was named teacher in the seventh grade. Directors who were absent were Metzger and Molden.

SEEING WAR UNADORNED

England's democratization of her military officer corps was dictated by practical necessity. More officers were needed for her army than could come from the social and economic class that traditionally had supplied her officer personnel.

But in a broader sense the steps announced by the War Secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha, are a belated shucking off by British of the romantic attitude toward war. The theory that military aptitude is a gift pertaining, along with certain habits of diction and the social graces, to a particular heroic class was a romantic survival. It ill befitted the modern conception of war, which is so democratic and unromantic that even the riders in baby buggies are called on to don gas masks.

It is impossible to reconcile this business conception of war with that typified by the saber-flashing rider who ended up, as aspirated to, as an equestrian statue. The statues are erected nowadays to the unknown soldier and later on may be erected, if any are, to the unknown occupant of the baby buggy.

The British certainly know war's ugliness quite as well as anybody but are more loath to part with what is traditional. After the World War they right back to the polite stratagems by which entrance to Sandhurst and Woolwich have been restricted, in the main, to those of heroic birth and breeding. It took the even grimmer realism of post-war war preparations to force a clean break at last with the romantic tradition.

J. HAM LEWIS SPEAKING

No one—well, hardly anyone—is a better Democrat than Senator James Hamilton Lewis, senior senator from Illinois. And no senator, Democratic or Republican, is half so effulgent, sartorially and oratorically, as the magnificent J. Hamilton. So Democrats and Republicans alike must listen with due reverence when Senator Lewis speaks on issues of national or party policy.

Senator Lewis has spoken on an issue which is of paramount importance both to the nation and to his party—a Presidential third term. And Senator Lewis has said that an attempt by President Roosevelt to get a third term would "destroy the Democratic party." The senator was quick to add that Mr. Roosevelt is "not such a man as to present himself for a continuous third term."

From his own acquaintance with Mr. Roosevelt, Senator Lewis insisted, he "knew" that the President would not seek to be re-elected in 1940, because "that would bring on his party a charge that it was attempting to do what George Washington refused to do and was violating a cardinal principle for Franklin Roosevelt, which violation the party had denounced when threatened for Theodore Roosevelt.

Well, J. Hamilton Lewis has spoken; and that seems to be that.

Ho, hum! We wonder whether Mr. Roosevelt will run for a third term.

Another little need of the times is something to get the bonds of matrimony back up to par.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Every wise woman knows the tailored suit will never die. It's an American classic and long may it live, but it's not a costume to inspire the imagination of a designer. For that the dressmaker and sport suits vie for first place. And what a wide variety of styles they do present!

Most frequently seen is the slim skirt and short fitted jacket combination. Rosemary Lane favors this, but hers escapes the commonplace by unusual yoke treatment. For summer she combines white doeskin fabric with a butter Scotch tan yoke and carries out accessories in the tan. A black wool suit for autumn will have her zigzag yoke outlined in military braid and the snug-fitting jacket will zipper up front.

For Kay Francis in "Secrets of An Actress" we did a bottle green spongy wool suit with tubular-fitted jacket extending as far down as the lower hipline. A narrow strip of milk makes up the choked collar and outlines the front closing of the jacket. It's worn with a slim skirt, but is a fashion "exclusive" for tall girls. However a flared tunic coat we did to top another slim skirt for Kay in the same picture can be copied by little girls as well as the stately ones. It's widely belted in self material somewhat like the ones worn in 1914.

There is just as much variety in the jackets of sports suits this season. Although there are some boxy types most of them are short like Margaret Lindsay's lumber jacket of pastel plaid wool with its wide attached belt lacing up the front like a peasant's girdle. She wears this unique jacket with an off-white wool skirt. Also

"It's You I Want" by ALLENE CORLISS

CHAPTER XIII

The cab stopped in front of Hester Prentice's house. Whitney said: "Good-by, Scott . . ." and felt his arms go around her.

She pushed him away. She said: "I thought we agreed that that was no good. We are both pretty decent people, Scott. Let's not forget that. Ever."

He stared at her a moment, his eyes frowning. Then he said: "You're right, of course. You're awfully right. Will I see you again before Thursday night?"

"I don't know. At the game, tomorrow . . ."

"Of course. We'll all go on to the Club afterward and dance . . ."

For a moment their hands clung together. For a moment it seemed almost like last year . . . the game tomorrow . . . the stadium packed, crowds cheering, the band playing, a voice yelling through a megaphone. Fur coats and frozen feet and at the end a mob swarming for the goal posts and the sky rust-red and gray in the west and shoulders pushing you and Tod buying Harvard banners and everyone rushing for the subway and making dates to meet later and yelling where . . .

"Tomorrow, then. At the game. We've all seats together probably. Red Towner is getting them for us . . ."

"I'm having dinner with Red later . . . at the Copley."

"Swell. We're dining with Kay but going on there later . . ."

Her hand slid away from his. She left him and ran up the steps. But once inside the door, she moved slowly up the stairs. For a moment there in that deep, blue dusk everything was different. Or was it? Scott still loved her. Tomorrow, Harvard played Dartmouth. Tomorrow night, she would dance at the Copley. She would be with Red Towner. But Scott would be there . . .

The baby spotlight swung past the gold horns of the band, swept whitely across the floor of the Copley Plaza ballroom, found Whitney dancing with Red Towner, and followed her relentlessly for the space of perhaps three minutes. Red didn't mind. He liked it. If it had been any other girl but Whitney, it would have bothered him. He would have squirmed and felt uncomfortable and been relieved when it moved on. But with Whitney it was different. You felt a little grateful for the spotlight. You felt it was indicated. That wherever she went it should be this way . . . he thanked heaven that if he wasn't much good at upholding the family traditions in investment banking, at least he could dance . . .

He said: "It's been a swell fall, Whitney . . . we've had a lot of fun, haven't we?"

His voice was wistful. Whitney, who hadn't thought of him consciously for hours, was suddenly, guiltily aware of him. She smiled at him. She said: "Yes, Red, we have."

Three months since that first night he had brought her here to the Copley to dance after the Harvard-Dartmouth football game. Three months during which she danced with him pretty continuously, here and there and elsewhere. It had been October then and Boston had been beautiful. Now it was December. It was nearly January. Christmas was over.

It had been a white Christmas. And they had all had dinner at the farm with Adam Prentice. An enormous dinner served in seven courses in the middle of the day. Holly wreaths tied with scarlet ribbon at the windows. Three Irish setters sprawled in front of the fire. Claire, Scott's mother, slender and discontented and neurotic, sitting in the most comfortable chair in the room, her faded, ash-gold head drooping on her long neck, her pretty, ineffectual hands busy with their eternal needlepoint. Hester, sitting erect and well-dressed, the Prentice garnets flashing dully on her thin old fingers, her lips compressed and disapproving. The room was too warm and there had been too much food served and she didn't approve of dogs in the house . . . not even in the country. Helena, in dull gold wool, her rust-colored head sleek as an Erté drawing, playing backgammon with Scott. It had been a year since she had last visited Boston . . . it would be a year before she would come again. Olivia, lovely and soft-lipped in the freelight, talking about breeding dogs with Adam Prentice. Her voice, interested and intelligent, but her eyes and thoughts never wandering far from Scott. Tod and herself exploring a stack of old

Sometimes a whole week would pass and Whitney would not see Scott. Then at a party she would look up and there he would be.

phonograph records, discovering "Yes, We Have No Bananas" and "That Precious Little Thing Called Love." Playing them with mingled wistfulness and glee. Later, the two of them, walking for miles across frozen ground because there wasn't snow enough for skiing and it was too cold to take the horses out. Coming back, exhausted and hungry, to find that everyone had gone back to town but Helena, who was staying overnight at the farm. Tod and Helena and herself sitting up until morning, feet sprawled toward the fire, talking about this and that. Finally going off to bed as dawn slid palely through the windows. The sheets ice-cold and blue frost on the windowpanes. The fragrant, distinctive smell of Helena's cleansing cream and the smartness of her tailored black satin pajamas. Tod going back downstairs to fill hot water bottles for them from the kettle on the kitchen range. Design for a family Christmas . . .

Whitney came back abruptly to the Copley. Scott was cutting in. His hand light but peremptory on Red's black-broadcloth shoulder. "Sorry, old man, but you've had her quite long enough . . ." Red moving off toward the stag line. Scott's shoulder where his had been. Or not quite. A little higher. Accommodating itself to her better. Or perhaps it was just that they had danced together so much . . . over so many years, across so incredibly many dance floors.

They didn't speak. There was no need for words. The way they had both been waiting for. All the evening. This was what they waited for every evening that they were together where there was music and dancing. And in the last two months this had happened fairly often. It was bound to, of course, when you traveled in the same crowd, were asked to the same parties, frequented the same ballrooms and supper clubs. It was inevitable. It had begun that night after the Harvard-Dartmouth game and it had gone on ever since. There was nothing premeditated about it. Nothing arranged. It just happened. Occasionally it didn't work out right. Occasionally they went to different places. Sometimes a whole week would pass and they wouldn't see each other. Then at a cocktail party she would look up and there he would be. They would greet each other casually, over the heads of people, with perhaps no more than the quick lifting of a hand. But they would know. A party that had been just a party would suddenly be something else. The room would come alive, would glow and sparkle. Everyone would immediately seem amusing and bright and there would be much to laugh about and the hour would beat and throb with life and all her nerves would sing with a sort of quiet ecstasy. All this because that other person breathed the same air, shared the same freelight, was part of the hum of conversation and careless laughter. Sometimes they scarcely spoke to each other. Sometimes it simply meant a moment together. Scott lighting a cigarette for her, their little fingers touching for an instant. Sometimes it was less than that. Again, like tonight, it was more. A dance. Sometimes two. Never more than that. With someone always cutting in. Dragging her away. When she wanted so to stay. But that was part of the bittersweet potency of the situation. That anything they had now must be temporary, impermanent, illusive as a smoke ring, tenuous as a day-dream . . .

It could so easily have been otherwise. They could have secretly met in out-of-the-way restaurants and tearooms. They could have sat in small, dark movie theaters and held hands. They could have arranged that more often their evenings should be spent in the same place. But they didn't. They had never discussed it. They had never mentioned it again after the first day in the cab. It had just been something they had arrived at without words. It had something to do with Scott's having said: "I've tried to make her happy . . . it's the least I can do, isn't it?" With her having said: "We're two pretty decent people, Scott . . . let's not forget that. Ever."

THE THREE BUDGETEERS

"Oh, dear," sighed the first, "I'm so tired.

I finally found out what I wanted, but I'm worn out."

"It's lovely," sighed the second, "but I paid more than I wanted to."

"It's easy," said the third. "I've been studying the advertisements for days, and I knew where to look for what I wanted—and how much I'd have to pay."

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

A tender story of a young girl's devotion to the wrong sort of man is combined with an amazing behind-the-scenes glimpse of brutal penal methods in "Prison Farm," the new drama which Paramount brings to the screen of the Bristol Theatre tonight.

Shirley Ross, one of Hollywood's most promising young actresses, has her first big dramatic role as the girl whose love for her gunman-sweetheart is so strong that she follows him into a brutal prison camp rather than face separation. Lloyd Nolan plays opposite her, while the leading three-ome is completed by handsome John Howard, who rings up an outstanding performance as the crusading prison doctor.

When her connection with Nolan, a fugitive from justice, lands her in a corrupt prison farm, Miss Ross is subjected to back-breaking labor at sweat-shop hours, housed in inhuman quarters and constantly abused by degenerate officials who use their charges for their personal profit.

Porter Hall, who has been seen recently as a "menace" in "Wells Fargo" and "Stolen Heaven," plays an important role as one of the corrupt prison officials. Others in the cast are J. Carroll Nash and Anna Q. Nilsson, the famous Swedish star of the silent films, who is now making her "come-back."

GRAND

The screen's youngest "Mr. and Mrs." team, Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane—who are plighted, incidentally, to become such a team in real life within the next year—comes to the screen of the Grand Theatre today in "Men Are Such Fools," the second of the pictures in which the Warner Bros. Studio cast them opposite each other.

The unmistakable popular approval which greeted the young couple's first appearance as a screen team, in "Love, Honor and Behave," made it inevitable that the studio should give the public some more of what it so evidently likes.

"Men Are Such Fools" is another tale of the efforts made by a young couple, genuinely in love, to solve a problem of human relationships which for a time seriously threatens to make it impossible for them to achieve a happy wedded life.

Although the picture is packed with lively and amusing incidents, it has a serious underlying theme of wide general application, for the problem which threatens to part the young couple who are its chief characters is that thoroughly modern one of whether a wife should continue to work outside the home after marriage.

W. C. T. U. Meets at Home Of Mrs. Doron Green

The August meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Doron Green, 319 Radcliffe street. Mrs. Ada Sands read the Scripture lesson from Proverbs, fourth chapter of Thessalonians, fifth chapter, in which obedience to law, and the development of sustaining character are emphasized as qualities necessary to really live and not merely exist. After being led in prayer by Mrs. Sands, the yearly reports from each department were read by Mrs. Raymond Beswick, the secretary.

These accounts of work done by the various departments of the organization served to make the members cognizant of the activity of the W. C. T. U. Thirty-five dollars was reported paid to the Frances Willard Centenary Fund. Two new members have been added to the enrollment since the July meeting. On September 10th a county convention will be held at Churchville. The delegates with the alternates are as follows: Miss Anna Heritage and Miss Verna Miller, Mrs. William DuHamel and Mrs. Beswick. The State Convention at Williamsport will be attended by Mrs. Raymond Beswick with Miss Haines as alternate.

Eight members of the local branch were present at the W. C. T. U. Day at Ocean Grove. The various ladies recalled the highlights of the occasion as follows: "Our County president, Mrs. Elsie Nixon, presented the subject 'Membership'. One address given spoke of the need of hatred of the things that are bad. 'We are apt to accept only casually, and not ritually the things that are not good for ourselves and our nation. It behooves us to be wide awake,'" she stated.

Mrs. Ella Black, state president, made a forceful address in which she eulogized the outstanding service rendered the society by Dr. Ella M. George, of Beaver Falls, leader of Pennsylvania temperance workers from 1907 to 1927. It was during her administration that the membership in Pennsylvania increased from 20,000 to 47,000, in a period of 20 years.

"Time Marches On," a pageant depicting the growth of the Union with its human curtain of women garbed uniformly in red and white, presented a most novel effect. Each state was illustrated by an historical event, while the "Father of Our Country" and the immortal Lincoln once more assumed the center of the stage and recalled not only what they accomplished but what we could enforce by more conscientious effort in directing the thought of the world. Appreciation of the cards of sympathy sent to the sick and bereaved and the yearly contribution of the organization to the Daily Vacation Bible School were acknowledged.

Miss Jane Rogers presented an original scrapbook containing various phases of work done by the several departments of the Temperance Society; Mrs. DuHamel read an account of humanity in ermine, being part of the life story of the Crown Prince of Sweden, "who though descendant of a long line of royalty is nevertheless as human and democratic as any ordinary man. He is keenly interested in the youth of all lands and feels that bitterness and strife and fighting comes because we never have a chance to get together and talk things over.

"A strong mind in a strong body," and for that reason he is a total abstainer. He never drinks a toast in wine or liquor at any Swedish dinner or social affair. The glass of the Crown Prince holds water, nothing more. He says, 'As far as I am concerned I do not drink, because I think it would set a bad example if I did. I couldn't boost Scouting and athletics and liquor in the same breath. I'm for abstinence as a principle.'"

The hostess served refreshments after which the meeting adjourned.

JONES TOO MUCH FOR CHEMICAL MIXERS

The Rohm and Haas team had the second half crown within their grasp last evening but succumbed before the mighty arm of that old veteran, Milt Jones, of the Odd Fellows. Jones held them to six hits as the Oddies trimmed the chemical workers, 6-4.

The Odd Fellows were quite meek against Jones. Until the final inning, they had but three hits and thanks to two miscues by Cooper had counted a pair of tallies in the second. It was in the last canto that they mustered three hits to put two more runs across.

The defeat was handed to the car-topped Bill Gallagher. Gallagher wasn't very much of a puzzle to the 1937 second half champs as they battered him for nine hits, three of which were two-baggers.

Sid Purcell had a good night with the stick, socking out a pair of doubles in three trips to the pentagon. Morrell continued his hard hitting with two hits in three appearances at the plate.

GRUNDY NINE WINS OVER ST. ANN'S TEAM

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
—Schedule for Tonight—
ODD FELLOWS—ST. ANN'S
(Grundy's field)
Umpire, Kervick; scorer, Juno
ROHM & HAAS—SUPERIOR
(Freedom's field)
Umpire, McGinley; scorer, Dolan

Determined to hang onto second place in the Bristol Twilight League, the Grundy woolen mill nine conquered the St. Ann's team, 6-1, last evening on the former's diamond.

The Frymen gained the lead in the first frame and kept it throughout and with Joe Antonelli curving them in fine style, the Saints were practically helpless at the plate, getting but four safeties.

The winners collected twelve hits off the St. Ann's southpaw, Pat McGahan and added by five errors had an easy time of it. Jesse Vanzant and Stan Dick made three hits each. For St. Ann's, Johnny Dougherty, batting in his injured brother's lead-off position, had a triple and single in three trips to the plate.

County Bankers Tour Lehigh County Farms

were told by Mr. Hacker that approximately 90 per cent of the potato fields in the Berks, Lehigh and Northampton county potato belt are dead as the result of blight which caused great damage during the rainy spell in July. Only the potato growers who were successful in getting their crops sprayed during the rainy spell have fields still green and thriving. The crops that have died are apt to rot as the result of the blight, while those that are growing will probably come through the trying season in good shape.

On this farm so much faith is attached to the value of spraying that it is practiced all through the growing season and even after the vines have died naturally, in order to preserve the potatoes until picking is completed. A season like the present one with very frequent rains and much humid weather is a real test of the value of potato spraying on farms where they are grown so extensively.

While visiting the Frantz farm Mr. Hacker informed the visitors that this farm was the scene of the last Indian massacre in Lehigh county and that the victims were buried somewhere on the farm.

Dinner was served at the Guthsville Hotel, after which the party continued to the Trojan Farms, owned and operated by the Trojan Powder Company. Here was observed an area of 900 acres under cultivation in the production of seed corn, seed wheat and seed oats and alfalfa and potatoes. A tract of 30 acres is devoted to orchards.

A five-year rotation is practiced in grain growing and a three-year rotation in potatoes. Wheat yields an average of 26 bushels per acre over a period of years. No livestock, outside of work horses, is kept on these farms and as a result all hay, straw and grain crops not needed for horse feed are sold. A hot water heated potato storage house constructed in an old farm barn was found very interesting. The potato grading and cutting machinery was also inspected.

A well arranged display room adjoining the potato storage house gave the visitors on this farm a splendid idea of the various products grown and sold here, while charts on the walls explained the farm practice methods which are quite systematic.

A display of products of the powder company revealed the fact that cornstarch is used in the manufacture of blasting powder by this firm, the fourth largest of its kind in the country.

A light rain falling during the visit to these farms prevented outdoor observations, but the visitors found much of interest in and around the farm buildings. A very systematic method of preparing potato spray was demonstrated.

This being the last stop on the tour, the visitors returned home by way of Allentown.

WANTS FRIENDLY PROBE

impeachment; they are also crimes, and the determination of whether a crime has been committed is the business of courts. If, as a result of a Grand Jury investigation, indictments are voted, the men accused will have ample opportunity to defend themselves.

"Quite commonly, public officials when falsely accused have welcomed the opportunity to clear themselves which a trial affords. They have preferred a trial in open court to a whitewashing by friendly politicians."

PENNSYLVANIA 'JUSTICE'

(Boston Herald)

"The executive usurpation under way in Pennsylvania does not differ essentially from abuses in Louisiana under Huey Long. As a master of the Legislature, the Kingfish got what he demanded and was practically above the law. Governor Earle is just as much the boss of things in his State. If he does not wish to have his alleged misdeeds investigated by a Grand Jury, that's all there is to it. If he prefers to have a gubernatorial investigation of the Governor, that settles it. Therefore, a legislative committee which is, in effect, a gubernatorial committee, dominated by him, will become his judge and jury."

"The legislative bills now in process furnish him about everything he needs. One gives the House (Democratic three to one) 'exclusive jurisdiction' for 90 days over officials liable to impeachment. Any Grand Jury investigation within that period will be 'unlawful.' Another bill empowers the Speaker to appoint a committee to investigate, with the right to subpoena papers and witnesses."

"A third measure 'suspends retroactively as well as prospectively' any other investigation while the House is on the job. A fourth provides that the Attorney General (Governor Earle's man) may 'in his absolute discretion supersede and set aside the District Attorney of the county.' If a court objects, it may name an attorney from another county, but the Attorney General may appeal and, pending that appeal, nothing can be done."

"Thus, by devious means, is the Governor with the aid of a supine General Assembly, heading off a Grand Jury which was to investigate, on August 8, charges against him and 13 of his associates. 'Even-handed justice' in the Keystone State is abolished, for the time being, so far as this cozy little group is concerned. There won't be any ordinary justice until the end of the campaign of Governor Earle, who is a candidate for United States Senator."

AT HARRISBURG

(The Washington Post)

"If a great constitutional issue is at stake in Pennsylvania, as Gov. Earle contends, the Legislature has adopted a strange method of dealing with it."

"The row in the Keystone State revolves about the right of Grand Juries to investigate the conduct of State officials. Gov. Earle contends that his administration should be investigated only by the Legislature."

"The principle of government by law and not by men implies that public officials have no more than equal standing with other citizens before the law. But Gov. Earle proposes to give them a special status. Grand Jury investigations have been one of the most effective weapons in the hands of citizens against corrupt government. But Grand Juries would be silenced in Pennsylvania when charges are brought against high executive officials. Under this arrangement if officials have enough political support in the Legislature to prevent impeachment they could remain in power despite the gravest of charges."

"Bills to stop the Earle investigation and curb the power of Grand Juries are being rushed through the Legislature at Harrisburg without any apparent attempt to analyze their implications. The proposed inquiry will be taken over by a committee of the House of Representatives where Gov. Earle has a safe majority. In these circumstances it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the Governor's chief concern is not adherence to the State Constitution, but merely a shift of this inquiry into the hands of his friends. Such conduct will inevitably raise suspicion that he has something to hide, and that he is willing to make hasty changes in the State's judicial system to avoid revelation."

GOVERNOR EARLE'S WAR

(The Springfield (Mass.) Union)

"Governor Earle's war upon the courts of Pennsylvania has encountered a new check in the action of the judge in charge of Grand Jury proceedings, impounding all the evidence on charges of corruption and misconduct brought against the State administration, which the Governor and Legislature had taken steps to seize in the attempt to stop the courts from doing their work."

"The manner in which the Governor and his abject followers jammed through the legislation, with no public hearings and the contents of the bills known only in the most general way to the majority of legislators, in the attempt to break up the Grand Jury investigation, is a disgrace to the State."

"But, as was to be expected, the judiciary has moved to uphold its rights and the rights of the people to the private, impartial hearings that are of the bedrock of our legal system."

"Had the Governor and his henchmen succeeded in the enforcement of plans to revolutionize the form of government, through retroactive laws designed to prevent the punishment of wrongs committed both in the future and the past, making State officials and legislators immune from court prosecutions, a first-class support and defense would have been provided for hatching political corruption of every sort. A partisan and dishonest State machine would have been answerable only to itself."

"But now the judge has cried 'Not so fast' on the move for a legislative whitewash of charges. He has taken prompt and bold action. The Earle-appointed District attorney was threatened with a penitentiary sentence in case he refused to turn over the evidence to the Legislature. It must now decide whether it dares to commit a similar assault upon a State judge."

"The Pennsylvania travesty is an amazing and revealing instance of the kind of government it is sought to impose upon Americans, not only in a particular State, but in the Nation. Every American has a vital interest at stake in this struggle that transcends State lines."

INVESTIGATORY TECHNIQUE

(The Newark (N. J.) Evening News)

"Under the code duello the challenged party had the choice of weapons. He could designate rapiers or pistols at dawn, sabers and coffee at 8 or six-ounce gloves in the school gym immediately after the class anti-war demonstration. Our investigated politicians claim the same privilege. Thus when Tammany Boss Hines was indicted he demanded a trial and a jury 100 miles removed from the scene of the alleged crime. In Pennsylvania Governor Earle, if investigated he must be, plainly considers it his prerogative to name the time, the place and the investigatory agency. Our own Mr. Hague had the same opinion, although his choice of weapons differed from Mr. Earle's."

"Earle insists the Legislature investigate charges of blackmail, extortion and political coercion brought against him and 13 associates. Equally insistent is the Pennsylvania Supreme Court that the inquiry be made by the Dauphin County Grand Jury. There is where Mr. Hague and Mr. Earle change stance. Mr. Hague complained the Hudson county election investigation should not be made by the Legislature, that the Assembly by 'invading' Hudson county usurped the powers of the courts. Strange to say, our courts agreed."

"The reason for the diverse preferences of Mr. Earle and Mr. Hague is clear. Mr. Earle controls Pennsylvania's Democratic Legislature. Republicans predominate on the court. Mr. Hague did not control the Republican Legislature, anyway not more than one house. With all respect to the independence of our judiciary, it may be noted that Mr. Hague never found Hudson county's system of jurisprudence too independent in election matters. As for Hudson's Grand Juries, their freedom of thought and action invariably have been above reproach—from City Hall."

"Thus in the choice of investigatory weapons, it all depends on the point of view or how you're fixed."
